NOTES: C Compiler

C Compiler

Variables

- `static`: variable retains its value even after it goes out of scope
  - Value is initialized with 0
- `extern`: variable is defined in another file
  - If no non-extern variable of the same name exists in another file, the linker will throw an error
  - You cannot import static variables with `extern` (they are local to the file)